Teaching Consultations Overview

Individual teaching consultations are available to all NYU instructors, whatever the pedagogical question or challenge. We can help clarify your learning goals to better design courses, identify effective strategies for student engagement, ensure an inclusive classroom environment for all students, and much more.

Our Approach

Our first goal is to create a comfortable, confidential space for you to work through the pedagogical issues you face in your classrooms. Once we've identified key challenges and goals, we will work together to design opportunities for your students to apply and reflect on their learning, practice critical thinking, and exercise autonomy as learners and problem-solvers. Together we can think through inclusive, digitally accessible, and usable experiences that—to paraphrase NYU’s mission—embrace diversity and ensure a wide range of perspectives.

What to Expect

● If you're interested in a consultation, email teaching@nyu.edu. We will respond within 24 business hours. After that, you will be asked to fill out this form (https://tinyurl.com/vjn6s3x), which you can also do directly, skipping the email.

● Once we receive your completed form, we will connect you with a consultant. You'll hear from us within the week.

● Some consultation requests suggest larger projects. In such cases, you may be contacted for a more comprehensive discussion. Some requests are also best suited to other NYU teams, and in such cases we'll connect you to the appropriate resource.

● In most cases, however, our next step will be to schedule your consultation, either at your campus location or ours. To accommodate all NYU faculty, remote consultations via video conference are also possible.

● Most consultations will 30-50 minutes. If more than an hour is needed, we're happy to schedule another session.

● After the consultation, you will receive a follow-up survey to help us improve our service. We very much appreciate your response!
